JB-POWER COMPLETE MACHINE

KAWASAKI Z900 Super Four / Z1

Aiming for the world's best quality and performance motorcycle, Kawasaki Heavy Industries put all stakes on one card and finally released the long-awaited Z1, in 1972. With the release of the W1 in 1966 and the 500SS MACH III in 1969, Kawasaki aspiringly strived to establish their "BIG BIKES", yet failure to overcome the "Wall to the World" resulted in only moderate sales numbers. Therefore, Kawasaki initiated the development of an even more powerful, 750cc DOHC straight-four-cylinder, flagship model, yet in 1968 Honda launched the CB750Four (K). With Honda being one step ahead, the surpassed Kawasaki Team changed their plan to build a motorcycle exceeding Honda's CB750 by far, the Z900 Super Four (Z1). Ultimately, managers and engineers making the right decisions and consequently aiming for a world-beating product, led to the birth of the hugely successful Z1, which became the cornerstone of today's Kawasaki motorcycles. Even today, it can be said that no bike exceeds the legendary Z1. Forty years after its launch the most amazing motorcycle in the world still shines.
